Pediatric Dental Seminar and Research Coordinator

The Pediatric Dentistry seminar series covers in depth all of the clinical techniques necessary for providing advanced Pediatric Dental Care.

The Research Development is necessary for continuing the integrity of the advanced education curriculum. In addition, residents learn to be objectively critical of published research. Research is being performed at Argonne National Laboratories, Center for Comparative Medicine, Developmental Center for Therapeutics, Ann and Robert H. Lurie Special Infectious Disease laboratory, Robert H. Lurie Comprehensive Cancer Research Center, Human Genomics Core, Bisco Inc., NUseq and DQSC. This Pediatric Dental residency is the only one in the nation to perform Synchrotron radiation studies on remineralization and demineralization. It is also the first to perform Probiotic research (IRB approved) on dental caries in children. In addition, it was the first to complete deep sequencing, whole genomics and metatranscriptomics on the oral microbiome, in children with A.S.D., normotypical healthy children and “blue zone” children. The first whole genome deep sequencing of the nasal microbiome was also just completed. We have just completed a multi-phase cancer cell line project with humanized mice and prebiotic supplementation and determined that xylitol inhibits tumor growth and lengthens survivability. The metabolomics analysis uncovered the mechanism of action.
